Kelly and Papke Who Meet on Saturday

(By W. W. Naughton.)

In private life Hugo Kelly and Billy Papke are well-groomed, presentable fellows. They certainly do their share toward upholding the claim that the breed of prize fighters has improved since the passing of the bare-knuckle days.

When they stepped into the ring at Dreamland some nights ago to be introduced to the Hudson-Murphy crowd, they gripped hands heartily and smiled like a brace of Chesterfields. Before leaving the ring they shook and smiled a second time.

Just courtesy, or civility, or whatever you please to term it, for down in their hearts Billy and Hugo detest each other as bitterly as any two broken-nose rivals did in the palmy days of the turf and the "raw uns."

The feeling between them is so intense that it will surely aid determination to their milling when they meet in Coffroth's arena on the afternoon of May 15.

The Kelly-Papke feud is an old one, and Young Ketchel is mixed up in it in a way that increases the hard feelings. Papke and Kelly had two bouts in the east, one a draw and the other a decision in Papke's favor. They were ten-round affairs, and while Kelly claimed that the circumstances of the second meeting didn't warrant the giving of the credit to Papke, the latter figured in the record as the winner, and that's what counts. Losers may go on explaining things year in and year out, but little notice is taken of them.

The Papke-Kelly vendetta was lost sight of temporarily when Young Ketchel came into Papke's life. Ketchel gained a decision over Papke at Milwaukee, and the bout was of such a character that it meant a return meeting. The second event took place at Los Angeles, and the sporting world experienced quite a shock when it was learned that Papke had battered Ketchel round after round and finally knocked him out.

Papke was a big man when he visited San Francisco soon afterward. He was at the ringside of the second Joe Gans-Battling Nelson fight, and you could hear fight fans on every side whispering "That's him with the green hat."

It looked about that time as if anything further Papke might do would be largely in the way of repetition, but the prize ring always did spring surprises. Ketchel faced Papke a third time, in San Francisco, and defeated him so decisively that people were at a loss to explain the Los Angeles happening. Instead of being looked upon as a sterling performer, Papke came to be regarded as an accident.

Then Hugo Kelly took up the running again. In a 20-round bout with Papke at Los Angeles Hugo did the better work, in the opinion of the writer and many others, but Big Jim Jeffries, who always was sensitive about hurting men's feelings in cases of that kind, proclaimed the bout a draw. Kelly was chagrined and Papke went a rung or two lower still in public opinion.

Under cover of a decision of the appellate division of the supreme court, which permits oral betting, the layers of odds took up their stations on the concourse in front of the stand and in whispers and by nods accepted wagers and gave odds. The method was veiled in mystery accompanied by searching glances and stealthy looks. If the would-be bettor was known to the bookmaker his bet was accepted with matters "you're on."

No money was passed; the "bookmaker" trusted the bettor to search him out after the race and pay him the amount of his wager if he lost, and the bettor on his part trusted the bookmaker to look him up in the same fashion and give him his winnings if he won.

Some of the layers of odds settled outside the grounds after the last race and others on the train coming back, but most of them put off settlement until tomorrow morning at appointed headquarters in town.

The race of the day, the Metropolitan Handicap, was won in handy fashion by King James, who led the field home by six lengths.

Favorites fared badly during the day, only two, King James and Newmarket winning. The other winners, however, were well played. A great added starter in the steeplechase and backed from five to four, defeated the 4 to 5 favorite Sir Walter, in a mild drive.

thirteen-inning game today, during which Umpire Cusack was assaulted by one of the visiting players and three of them were ordered off the grounds. Boston defeated Cincinnati by a score of 3 to 2.

In the twelfth inning when Catcher Roth, running for McLean, was called out at the plate on a close decision, he attacked Umpire Cusack, striking him with both hands on the chest. Several of the Cincinnati players crowded around the official, threatening him with bats, but the Boston players succeeded in quieting the visitors. Score: R. H. E. Cincinnati..... 2 12 5 Boston..... 3 15 2 Batteries: Campbell and McLean; Ferguson, Matten and Bowerman.

AMERICAN LEAGUE.

Detroit, 4; New York, 6. Detroit, May 13.—New York caught Suggs weakening in the eighth and drove him out of the box, winning 6 to 4. Score: R. H. E. Detroit..... 4 12 0 New York..... 6 11 3 Batteries: Suggs, Willett, Donovan and Schmidt; Manning and Warhop and Kleinow.

Cleveland, 1; Boston, 8.

Cleveland, May 13.—Boston made it three straight from Cleveland today, completely outplaying the locals and winning 8 to 1. Young was easy for his former teammates and was poorly supported. Morgan was effective throughout. Score: R. H. E. Cleveland..... 1 5 4 Boston..... 8 17 0 Batteries: Young, Easterly; Morgan and Harriman.

Battled For Seventeen Innings.

Chicago, May 13.—Chicago and Washington battled for seventeen innings today and the game was called on account of darkness with the score 1 to 1.

White allowed only one hit in the last inning. Cantillon's tactics in the seventeenth inning probably saved his team from defeat. The locals had men on second and third with one out. Manager Sullivan then took himself out of the game and sent in Well-Jay, a left-handed batter. Cantillon then sent Hughes, who was then pitching to right field and sent in Gray, a left-handed pitcher. Sullivan countered by taking out Well-Jay after Gray had pitched one ball to him. Then Cantillon tried to withdraw Gray and send Hughes back against Owens, a right-handed hitter. According to a new rule it was up to Gray to finish pitching to the man who was then batting or give him a pass.

After some heated argument the umpires forced Gray to continue pitching to Owens. He did, and passed him. Tannehill was the next man up and Hughes returned to the box, while Ganley went to right field. Tannehill hit to Hughes and Altzies was forced at the plate. White ended the chances with a grounder to Dehanty. Score: R. H. E. Chicago..... 1 13 1 Washington..... 1 6 3
